Relationship with Program Knowledge Base

Students who enter study in educational leadership at UNC are exposed to four domains in which they (1) develop a personal vision for educational leadership and examine modes of inquiry for problem solving; (2) understand organizational culture, communication, and change; (3) explore educational leaders’ roles in professional development; and (4) examine social, political and economic influences from the external environment.

Nine belief statements guide the program’s courses and activities. Learning experiences in Leadership at the School District Level give particular emphasis to the italicized belief statements:

- Human growth and development are lifelong pursuits;
• Organizations are artifacts of a larger society;
• Learning, teaching, and collegiality are fundamental activities of educational organizations;
• Validated knowledge and active inquiry form the basis of practice;
• Moral and ethical imperatives drive leadership behavior;
• Leadership encompasses a learned set knowledge, skills, and attitudes;
• Effective leadership in education organizations depends on the individuals and team efforts;
• Leaders’ behaviors and actions model their beliefs and values;
• Leaders effect positive change in individuals and organizations.

Course Objectives

Students of Leadership at the School District level will focus upon acquiring knowledge, skills and attitude to enhance awareness that district level leaders exist in a dynamic environment requiring a systemic perspective.

Course activities are designed to enable student to:

1. Understand the importance of setting high standards for the district staff;
2. Acquire the knowledge and skills to lead and support a school community that is committed to and focused on learning;
3. Distinguish between managing the operation of schools and leading the organization, including an understanding of the role of conflicts among the different departments;

4. Understand the importance of communication with various constituents and identify a variety of means for sharing information;

5. Develop an understanding of the role of the district administrator as it relates to organizational change.

These knowledge bases, skills and behaviors, and attitudes will be developed using individual readings, group activities, class discussions and interview, and other assignments. As a result students will be able to be able to see, think, explain and act like a superintendent and or a district level leader.
